Ukraine hosts biggest-ever gay pride parade

Ukrainian President and former comedian Volodymyr Zelenskiy has promoted a more tolerant culture.

Ukrainian politicians and foreign diplomats joined thousands marching in a gay pride parade in Kiev on Sunday, the biggest and most peaceful ever in the former Soviet country.

Crowds of people, many dressed in bright colors, paraded along streets in the center of the Ukrainian capital, holding up banners saying, "Diversity is beautiful," "Human rights = happy country," "No violence — yes rights!"

They were flanked by a thick cordon of police in helmets but there was no sign of violence despite the presence of a few hundred protesters.

Sunday's march in Kiev was part of Pride Month, celebrated by lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) people around the world.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy, a former comedian who took office last month, has promoted a tolerant culture, saying he stands for all people's equality and freedom.

"Our desire is to convey to a majority of people that LGBT is normality," Eduard, a 17-year-old tattoo artist, told Reuters.

"I am taking part for the fifth time. Ukraine is making significant progress compared to previous years. Security and organization are much better."

Zelenskiy's office urged the police to prevent violence and guarantee the safety of participants in the March of Equality.

"Ukraine's Constitution states that citizens have equal constitutional rights and freedoms," it

"Our desire is to convey to a majority of people that LGBT is normality."

said in a post on its Facebook page on Sunday morning.

Ruslana Pamukhnyk, one of the organizers of the capital's annual gay pride march, told journalists after the event that about 8,000 people had attended it, far more than 5,000 last year.

"We are satisfied with the cooperation with the police. There were some small incidents, but no injuries," she said.

"The most important [thing] for us is human rights."

Under Western-backed leadership, Ukraine's parliament passed legislation in 2015 to ban discrimination in the workplace as part of a series of laws Ukraine needed to pass to qualify for a visa-free travel agreement with the European Union.

"Thank you to the police and other law enforcement agencies for protecting today's Pride event in Kiev," Judith Gough, the British ambassador to Ukraine who joined the march, wrote in a tweet.

She posted pictures of herself and other Western ambassadors who participated in the event.

William B. Taylor, charge d'affaires at the U.S. Embassy in Ukraine, wrote in a tweet: "We stand with all Ukrainians striving for equality and non-discrimination."

increased support for LGBT rights since a Western-backed leadership came to power in 2014, but critics say homophobic attitudes remain relatively widespread.

Sunday's march was a far cry from violent clashes witnessed at the same event in 2015, but protesters also made their voices heard. REUTERS

Former US Congressman Sestak joins prez race

2 Former U.S. Rep. Joe Sestak said on Sunday that he would seek the Democratic nomination for president, becoming the party's 25th candidate in the 2020 election. In announcing his candidacy, Sestak, 67, a retired three-star U.S. Navy admiral, emphasized his 31-year military career, the need to restore U.S. leadership in the world and challenges from climate change and China's growing global influence. "Our country desperately needs a president with a depth of global experience and an understanding of all the elements of our nation's power, from our economy and our diplomacy to the power of our ideals and our military, including its limitations," Sestak said. He warned of the dangers of China's influence, from its "virtual monopoly" in high-technology manufacturing supply chains to its Belt and Road infrastructure drive. REUTERS

Ethiopia's army chief, 3 others killed in failed coup

3 Ethiopia's army chief of staff and the head of the northern state of Amhara were killed in two separate but related attacks when a general tried to seize control of Amhara in an attempted coup, the prime minister's office said on Sunday. Amhara state president Ambachew Mekonnen and his adviser were shot dead and the state's attorney general was wounded in the regional capital of Bahir Dar on Saturday evening, Prime Minister Abiy

Ahmed's office said in a statement. In a separate attack the same night, Ethiopia's army Chief of Staff Seare Mekonnen and a retired general were both shot dead in Seare's home in Addis Ababa by his bodyguard. The two attacks were linked, the statement said, without giving details. Abiy's office named Amhara state security head General Asamnew Tsige as responsible for the foiled coup, without giving details of his whereabouts. REUTERS

Unit at Philly refinery completely destroyed in fire

4 The alkylation unit involved in a massive fire on Friday at Philadelphia Energy Solutions Inc.'s oil refinery has been completely destroyed, which will hamper the supply of gasoline from the East Coast's largest refinery, sources familiar with the matter said on Sunday. The destruction of the unit, coupled with damage from the fire that ripped through the 335,000 barrel-per-day (bpd) refining complex, could force the plant to remain shut for an extended period. The fire, which began in a tank and involved several explosions that sent a huge fireball into the sky, engulfing the surrounding areas in smoke early on Friday morning, was extinguished Saturday afternoon, the Philadelphia Fire Department said on Sunday in a statement. The gas valve that had been fueling the fire was shut off, and the tank involved in the blaze was isolated, the fire department said. REUTERS

Underground Mural Project gets underway

"I wouldn't call it graffiti art. I'd call it urban art."

DAN ATKINSON
letters@metro.us

The area underneath I-93 will see eight new murals from local and international painters next week as part of an installation that artists and high-end developers say bridges their communities.

The second Underground Mural Project kicks off Monday, as eight artists will spend the week installing new murals at the Underground Ink Park next to the Ink Block development, culminating with a block party on Saturday. Two years ago, nine artists painted murals in the eight-acre park underneath the I-93 overpass that separates the South End from South Boston, and National Development — which owns the park and developed Ink Block — plans to keep adding murals in the future.

"We made a commitment to really transform this space into an arts park. We see this as Phase 2," said Ted Tye, managing partner of National Development. "The underground was a really decrepit area. MassDOT wanted to change that. We looked at it and said this is our front door; we want to change it as well."

Boston-based creative agency Street Theory curated the 2017 installation and is handling this one as well, with National Development funding it. Victor Quinonez, creative director and co-founder of Street Theory, said the company wanted to emphasize diversity and place up-and-coming local artists with renowned muralists from around the globe.

"We really just want to give Boston a hub where you can come to one place and experience talent in the city," Quinonez said. "National Development and Ink Block get to say they have this amazing park next to their properties. It almost becomes just another amenity."

Tye said it wasn't a contradiction for the luxury-focused Ink Block to support art with its roots in the street.

"We knew we wanted to capture the urban vibe and we knew this was an area of the city that had a real arts focus and [we] tried to put the two of those together," Tye said. "I wouldn't call it graffiti art. I'd call it urban art."

Tye said National Development had reviewed the muralists' concepts but doesn't dictate ideas.

"We really just want to give Boston a hub where you can come to one place and experience talent in the city."

Victor Quinonez, creative director and co-founder, Street Theory

"This is a family environment. We want everything there to be in good taste but allow each artist to have the freedom to express themselves," he said.

Quinonez agreed, saying the installation was not built around any theme or place-specific concept, but an opportunity for artists to create something personal.

"This is a bit more tailored toward artists. ... We're not giving them a theme, like tying them to represent the history of the South End or South Boston," Quinonez said. "It's about leaving a little bit of themselves in the city to share with everyone."

Songs, passion
and the truthJessie Buckley as Rose-Lynn Harlan. NRON

Jessie Buckley takes on the role of Rose-Lynn Harlan in "Wild Rose." MOLLY GIVEN

Passion and dreams go hand in hand. Everyone in life has something they yearn for either silently or out loud.

Rose-Lynn Harlan played by Jessie Buckley in the new film "Wild Rose" certainly displays the latter. "Wild Rose" follows the story of the tenacious and colorful country songstress Rose-Lynn and her quest to make it to the United States and sing her way to stardom in Nashville.

But life, children, a strict mother, no finances and her recent stint in prison make her dream more complicated to achieve. Jessie Buckley sat down with Metro to give the scoop on her role in "Wild Rose", her new love of country music and why she thinks to have passion is to truly believe in yourself.

Buckley, a native of Ireland, is an experienced musician but had to take on a new skill set when learning to sing the popular American genre. "There is a kind of secret country movement in Ireland and Glasgow", says Buckley. "I had never sung country before, but I have done a bit of music. My mom's a musician and singer so I grew up in a musical household. Getting into country and that genre of music was a whole new adventure for me—it was great, I loved it."

The 29-year old says it was the honesty of the music that drew her in. "For me, the thing that kind of changed my life was the lyrics that are in country. They are very simple stories about people in their day to day life doing mundane things, but they somehow manage to capture the emotion of these people. People who are dreaming about something, or struggling against something or having their heart broken, or caught being cheated on or just wanting something for themselves. It's not something that is sparkled up, it tells a story about very real things often. The music isn't trying to embellish in any way. It's purely about the honesty about what the characters and people are living in the song, and that's the truth. You have to be truthful when you sing it as well."

That yearning and truth is what drives Rose-Lynn to continually reach for the stars, even when it seemed like the universe was against her, which for most of the film, it was. Despite the many setbacks and, to be perfectly honest, selfish actions Rose-Lynn takes in the film, her spirit is pure and tenacious, and frankly—unwilling to be broken. Something to admire, especially if you are equally yearning for a chance in life.

"She just had a passion, and when you're passionate about something or you fall in love with something or fall in love with someone, it can drive you mad," says Buckley. "It can drive you to keep moving forward, and she had a kind of unbelievable self-belief that there was something more to her life than the four walls that she was allowed to dream in or live in. That kind of tenacious courage was so exciting and terrifying and definitely challenged me as a person."

"Wild Rose" show-

cases the glitz and glam of a dream as well as the harsh reality of life—but the film also shows that one does not cancel out the other.

The story itself displays the desperate passion of a talented musician, but also showcases the inner struggle of accepting who you are and what you can do, not just what you want yourself to be. "I think that is the journey that she goes on. She thinks she has to run so far away from herself to be able to belong to this world, and become a different identity. Who you are and where you're from, and the stories you have in your own life and in your heart are the stories you need to say," says Buckley. "What she realizes is that she needs to accept that what she needs to say in her music is right back at home. Because that's all she knows, and her own individuality and her own story is powerful and beautiful—no one else can sing those songs, only her."

"Wild Rose" is now in theaters

'Stranger Things': Fashion comes to Hawkins

The cast of the Netflix series has participated in high-end fashion campaigns and editorials. Now some brands are releasing capsule collections inspired by the series.

LUZ LANCHEROS
lancheros@metro.us

When "Stranger Things" premiered in 2016, it caused world madness: not only because of its sci-fi conspiracy/child with mental powers/gang of children that saves the world + monsters plot but because it appealed enormously to that '80s nostalgia. This, of course, included its costumes and hairstyles, especially Steve's. The phenomenon grew so much that even Vogue and other fashion magazines made garment guides based on the characters from the series. But as "Stranger Things" continued to gain more and more popularity, major brands began to sign its cast starting with Millie Bobby Brown to appear on red carpets and editorials.

Her castmates soon followed, and brands have not been slow to create their own lines inspired by the show, especially with season three approaching. These are the hits that have made major fashion brands keep tuned to the series.

MILLIE BOBBY BROWN: FROM ELEVEN TO FASHION ICON

With 19 million followers on Instagram she stood out immediately attending awards ceremonies dressed by top designers like Calvin Klein. She now sits in the first row at fashion shows debuting at Coach Spring Summer 2017. At 15, Brown has participated in other projects, such as the remake of "Godzilla" polishing her style, which has been criticized in the past for being overly sexualized or making her appear older than she is. Dressed by Michael Kors, Jenny Packham, Armani and Kate Spade, as well as Oscar de la Renta for red carpets, Brown has done editorials for Interview, W Magazine, Vogue and for brands such as Moncler.

Red Sox once again look lost

Sox have already lost momentum gained in early portion of June.

matt.burke@metro.us

A few days back, it seemed like the Red Sox were finally going to break out of their funk and go on the top of run that propelled them to the best record in baseball a year ago. But this past weekend at Fenway served as another reminder that the 2018 and 2019 clubs are worlds different.

The Red Sox dropped two of three games to the lowly Toronto Blue Jays, the latest coming on Sunday afternoon as they were spanked, 6-1.

Somewhat ironically, 6-1 was also the score on Saturday when the Red Sox were the ones holding a commanding lead over Toronto. The Boston bullpen absolutely imploded, however, as Matt Barnes, Ryan Brasier and company were lit up to the tune of seven earned runs. The Sox eventually lost the game, 8-7.

It was the ugliest loss so far in a season already full of ugly losses.

"It seems like whenever we have a lead, we don't finish them, and whenever we're behind four or five, we come back," Red Sox manager Alex Cora said. "We're competing. We're doing a good job with that. It's just we have to take the next step in putting teams away. It helps everybody. ... But [6-1] should be enough to win. We still have to execute."

Michael Chavis attempts to track down a fly ball Sunday afternoon at Fenway Park.

Road ahead

The Red Sox have a quirky week ahead as they'll host the Chicago White Sox (36-38) in a three-game series beginning Monday at Fenway before two days off. The Sox will use that extra time to travel to London, where they will face the Yankees in two games this weekend. This will be the first time ever that Major League Baseball games will be played in Europe.

As for tonight's clash with the White Sox, however, Eduardo Rodriguez (8-4, 4.71 ERA) will get the ball for the Red Sox. Rodriguez has been steady of late, earning wins in four of his last five outings.

Chicago will send young righty Lucas Giolito to the bump as he'll look to improve on his 10-2 record (2.74 ERA).

USWNT set for clash with Spain

The U.S. women will take on another strong opponent today in France.

matthew.burke@metro.us

The U.S. women's national team passed their first true test of the 2019 Women's World Cup with flying colors as they dumped Sweden, 2-0, last Thursday. With the victory, the USWNT grabbed first place in Group F and remains one of the favorites to win the whole shebang as the World Cup now enters the round of 16.

Next up for the USWNT is Spain, whom they will face today at Stade August-Delaune in Reims, France (noon, FOX Sports 1).

Spain has gained significant momentum in recent years as a women's soccer hotbed despite having played in its first-ever World Cup four years ago in Canada. Forward Jennifer Hermoso has been brilliant for Spain recently as she found the back of the net seven times in the qualifying round and opened up World Cup play with a pair of goals against South Africa (a 3-1 Spain victory) back on June 8.

Spain's win over South Africa was, however, the only "W" they've recorded in World Cup play so far. In their second game in France this month, Spain lost to Germany, 1-0, and in their third contest they played to a draw with China.

All told, Spain's 1-0 loss to the Germans was their most impressive showing of the tournament so far as Germany has proven to be one of the tourney's powerhouses, having outscored opponents a combined 9-0 in four World Cup games played so far.

game when leading goal scorer Alex Morgan took on a hard foul in the first half. Morgan was walking gingerly after the play and was replaced at the start of the second half by Carli Lloyd.

Head coach Jill Ellis and Morgan herself were mum about the injury this past weekend, offering no specifics about the nature of the injury, but Ellis said Sunday that Morgan would be "fine" to play today against the Spaniards.

Also returning to the USWNT lineup today will be Julie Ertz, who did not play against Sweden due to a minor hip injury.

Goal count

It's difficult to say what has been more impressive by the U.S. women so far in the tournament, the fact that they have not allowed a single goal in their three games played or the fact that they have racked up 18 goals.

The USWNT has made life easy for goalkeeper Alyssa Naeher thus far. Against Sweden, the USWNT had possession of the ball 62 percent of the time. The Swedes only got two good looks on goal in the first half and did not sniff the net in the second half.

Here is a look at the goal count for the USWNT through three World Cup games:

Alex Morgan 5
Rose Lavelle 2
Lindsey Horan 2
Sam Kerr 2
Carli Lloyd 2
Julie Ertz
Jonna Andersson
Megan Rapinoe
Mallory Pugh

VSN Nuggets

Betting markets see Spain as very similar in quality to Sweden, the most recent victim of the USWNT. The closing line will likely finish near last Thursday's prices. The U.S. will be laying just over a goal, with odds suggesting a win in regulation at least 71 percent of the time, advancing through to the quarters well over 80 percent of the time.

If you throw out cakewalks vs. Thailand and Chile (whom the market rated as the two worst teams in the field based on a composite of goal lines), the U.S. still shut down respected Sweden with a 16-7 edge in shots, a 4-2 advantage in shots on goal, a 5-2 mark in corner kicks, and a possession edge of 62 percent to 38 percent. That, with Alex Morgan sitting out the second half. Jeff Fogle

Capricorn You will be anxious to get on with your plans. Your vision will inspire others to contribute, turning your idea into a bigger and better project than you anticipated. A partnership looks promising.

Aquarius Deal with issues that concern home, family or health. How you handle your time and money will affect the way others react to the choices you make.
